Constitution Changed By Executive Board

Revision of the constitution has already been completed by the executive board, and according to Willard White, it will be presented at the coming election for the approval of the Associated Students. Many of the new clauses have been placed by new clauses. Each commissioner has also prepared a set of by laws pertaining to their various commissions.

It was also announced that college seals can be obtained in Room 217 from Hicks at the rate of three for twenty-five cents. Students are urged to use these seals to advertise the college.

Fisk And Morris To Subject "A" Exam Set Accompany Prof. Hale For Saturday, June 1

Max Fisk and Leonard Morris will sail from Seattle June 24, on the "Africa Maru" for Yokohama. They will go with the Upton Close Oriental Expedition, which is an educational trip planned for students and leaders.

Upton Close is the non-de plume of Professor Joseph Washington Hale at University of Washington.

Lectures are given on the trip explaining many of the things before they are seen. A similar trip was made last year and it proved very successful, according to Upton Close. This expedition gives the opportunity to meet the problems of the East at first hand, and to understand them from an Oriental viewpoint.

After landing at Yokohama, Japan, Dean Fisk and Leonard plan to visit Tokyo, Kanakura, Nikko and then Fusan, Chosen, Korea. In China they will visit Manchuria, Peking, Peiping, Hankow, Shanghai, Harbin, and then return to Shanghai. They expect to sail for Seattle on the Albatross, August 14.

Will Give English 1A Spelling Exam

All English 1A students who have not met the spelling requirements will be given the opportunity of taking this examination at three o'clock May 24 in room 201.

List of words may be secured from any of the English instructors. This is probably the last time the test will be given this year. Students must pass this examination before getting credit for English 1A.

University of California will give the official Subject A examination, at nine thirty, Saturday morning, June 1, 1929 in Room 11 of the Santa Ana Junior college building.

This examination in English composition is required of all entrants to the University of California at Berkeley, to the University of California at Los Angeles, and to all junior colleges in the state of California.

The examination will be given again in September, but all prospective freshmen are advised to take the examination on June 1.

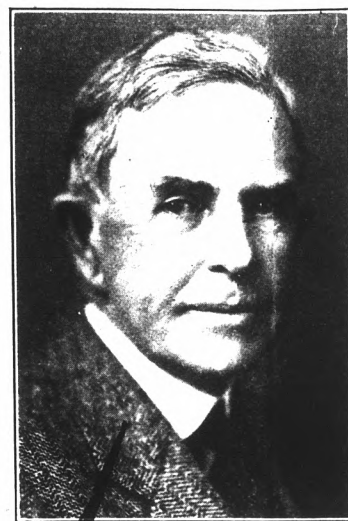

No person will be allowed to take the examination who does not present a statement from the principal of his high school that he has been graduated or will be graduated from the high school in June of this year.

The fee for the examination is fifty cents. Blue books, which every student must procure before entering the examination room, may be purchased in the college building. Pen and ink are required.

Press Club Theatre Plans Progressing

Plans for the Press Club Theatre party, which is to be given for the entire school, are progressing, and it is hoped that tickets will be on sale within another week. Mr. Yost has promised a splendid picture and unusual entertainment for this performance. It will take place in about two weeks.

Speaker At Fiesta

John Steven McGroarty, author of the "Mission Play" and lecturer who will be the main speaker this morning.

A. Banquet Set For May 23

A change in the date for the annual W. A. A. banquet now schedules it for May 23 in Ketter's third floor banquet room.

Miss Ida Hawes, Dean of Women at Pasadena junior college and Woman's Athletic Commissioner for the Southern California Junior College Conference, will be the main speaker of the evening.

Miss Anderson, formerly of Santa Ana and now in the U. C. L. A. physical education department, who was invited as an honored guest, has written that she will be unable to be present for the banquet owing to her departure for Europe the early part of this month.

This banquet is the annual affair climaxed the season of the woman's athletics in the college to which the girls of the Associated Students are invited by the Women's Athletic Association. Plans are being made for futuristic decorations, and the awarding of letters earned in sports will be a feature of the program.

Committee heads appointed include: Pauline Neddermeyer in charge of decorating and having under her supervision Eleanor Metzgar and Corinne Nelson, for room decorations; Bobby Isch for table decorations; and Lucile Goodrich for place cards. Lena Gillsey has charge of the invitations. Mary Ford is chairman for the entertainment, and Katherine Markel is taking care of the menu.

High School Seniors Guest of Dons Today

High school seniors from Santa Ana, Garden, Tustin, Huntington Beach, Anaheim, Garden Grove, Escondido, and San Juan Capistrano will share a luncheon with the Junior Lions at the Santa Ana Junior College today.

They will be entertained at this afternoon luncheon, which student body president, the various high schools will be entertained. A supper on the front lawn will be next enjoyed after which the visitors will be entertained with an informal dance in the gym. Many of the seniors will attend "Macbeth" this year's Shakespearean presentation, since complimentary tickets were sent to them last week.

Many of the visiting seniors expect to enter Santa Ana junior college in September, and to all who wish it, a chance will be given to see the various shops, rooms and laboratories.

O'Sullivan And McGroarty To Be On Program

With Jimmie Roach and Thomas Hall Glenn, student and faculty chairmen, in charge the second annual Fiesta is being celebrated today by Santa Ana Junior College Dons and Donas, and their guests, the Junior Lions and visiting high school seniors. Decorations, costumes, and the programs are all in keeping with the customs of colorful and romantic days of early California.

McGroarty on Program

At ten o'clock this morning students will assemble at the front entrance of the building for a procession around the campus, which will end at the arena where the morning program will be given. Mr. Hammond will give an introductory speech after which Father O'Sullivan will crown the Don and Dona. Madame Manuella Budrow will render some Spanish songs and Faustina will entertain with Spanish dances. John Steven McGroarty, prominent author of the "Mission Play", will be the main speaker.

Lunch in "Y" Hut

Following the program luncheon will be served in the Hut after which an informal dance in the gym will be enjoyed.

Senior Guests

High school seniors will be guests at the afternoon program in the arena. This program, which is scheduled for three o'clock, will feature a bull fight, and a Spanish comedy "The Bandit".

The Chorea club will present some natural dances and Louis Romoff will play several numbers on the violin. The famous Gerhardt-Trickey ventriloquist stunt will be presented followed with numbers by Carol Laughners Recording Trio.

Exhibits

Since many of the high school visitors plan to enter Santa Ana junior college next fall, exhibits have been arranged to give them an idea of the work being done here. The art and science exhibits will be in the science building, the painting exhibit in Room 11, and the swimming and diving exhibit in the swimming pool.

Lawn Supper

The front lawn will be the scene of the supper served at five o'clock. Following this an informal dance in the gym will be enjoyed until eight o'clock.

Macbeth

"Macbeth" will properly culminate the events of the Fiesta Day. Last year "Taming of the Shrew" was presented following the Fiesta, and this year Ernest Crozier Phillips is presenting "Macbeth", one of Shakespeare's greatest tragedies. Visiting seniors and Junior Lions will be seated in sections reserved for them.

French Clubs Put On Next Assembly

Assembly next Wednesday will be under the auspices of the three French club, "Gais Parisiens", and "Hotel d' Rambouillet" and "Bon Matin".

Prof. Cianfoni, head of the Santa Ana Conservatory of Music, will provide the program.

President Extends Welcome

It is a pleasure to welcome the graduating Seniors of Orange County High Schools and all of our guests at this delightful fiesta time. The New World is indebted to the Old for many things, but probably one of the most pleasing functions that could be introduced here is the Spanish custom of holding fiestas on appropriate occasions. In California especially where the climate, scenery and architecture correspond so closely to that of Old Spain, it is especially fitting that these colorful fiestas be revived. Our American life is normally and naturally so busy and strenuous that we are reluctant to spare much time for feasts or celebrations. Even the sports which we pursue, largely by proxy, in our leisure time are likely to become commercialized. Consequently it is very salutary for us to relax occasionally, to loaf and "invite our soul". It is our hope that every guest may feel the spirit of our College Fiesta and may become a true Don or Dona.

Prexy Welcomes Visitors

Today and tomorrow Santa Ana junior college has the pleasure of being host to the high school seniors of the county who have come as special guests of the college and the Junior Lions of California, who have gathered here for their third annual convention. I am sure that I am voicing the opinion of the Associated Students when I say that we are glad and proud to have you here. What you see of our traditional Fiesta will give you a taste of the spirit present in our college. We hope your stay and all that we have to offer you will be enjoyed to the fullest extent.

Make yourselves at home, seniors and Junior Lions, and let us know of anything we can do to make your brief stay a pleasant and successful one. And when you leave our campus may you take home with you the memory of one of the best times you have ever had.—Willard White, President Associated Students.

Fiesta Day

Fiesta Day dawned bright and clear thru the heavy sheets of rain, blanket of thunder, and the coverlet of snow. Don Sancho Banana jumped on his coal white charged steed and dashed over to the collegiate college of Santa Ana de Junior where there was to be much ado about nothing.

Gazing from a distance, as he charged along on his steaming mount, he could see the excess of Dons and Donas galloping about the campus—yessir, they were having a procession. By the time Don Sancho Banana had fully aroven on the scene they fooled him—they changed the scene and now they were trying to rope the Don and Dona into the arena.

By the aid of greased paths, cow-punchers and what have you, these essential beings of the gathering were corralled at the foot of their diamond studded throne. With eyes downcast they greeted the Patrick Juan Rosenbloom who had tripped daintily out into the arena. Croquet mallet in hand he cautiously advanced to a position adjacent with our two little friends. The air was taut with excitement. Bing! and it was broken! Amid the din and hush of a deafening applause was heard the delicate approach of a siren—the Don and Dona had been crowned!

THE END

One chap here is so narrow minded he can see thru a keyhole with both eyes.

Always The Way

Don senior Larga Cabeza y Estomago Grande set out one fearful day to meet his most cursed rival for the lovely affections of Senorita Dolores de La Cabeza y Cuello Larga. On that same fearful day did the most hated rival Don Amaizo y Pan Duro set out with the evil intent of extinguishing Don Senior Largo etc.

Many long years did these two gallant lovers search for each other, each with an ever burning fire of vengeance beneath his breast.

Finally, oh woe! and heaven forgotten day, these two gallant knights met. Women fainted and strong men paled, the very heavens seemed to tremble in expectation.

With shouts that were fearful to hear, the two lovers charged. A fearful explosion—a flash—and the two lovers had been consumed by their burning passions and gone to a better land.

And now when the long shadows fall upon the Alhambra and Granada, the lovely Senorita Dolores de La Cabeza y Cuello Grande sometimes sheds a tear for these two brave lovers as she sadly stands by her window—that is if she isn't busy making supper for her husband Don Jesus Sepulveda y Morales con la Cara De Puera, or tending to her three children, Chiquita, Muchachito and Panchito.

The funny thing about conceit is that the head never starts to swell 'til the brain ceases to grow.

Spanish Life

One of the outstanding features of the early California ranchers, was their hospitality. The old Dons always welcomed a stranger to their ranches and it was the custom to give him food and shelter for as long as he wished to remain. The traveler could always be sure that the Don of the hacienda would have a fresh horse for him to ride if he needed it.

The Dons and Donas with out exception were a happy, laughing, care-free lot. They did not believe in worrying, and quite evidently "lived to love, and loved to live." The respect of the Dons and Donas for their parents, was quite marked. When an older member of a family entered a room in which there were several people, the younger ones in the room would stand up and remain standing until the elders invited them to be seated.

The early California ranchers kept themselves busy in raising cattle and horses. Each ranch tanned its own hides and made its own tallow for trading with the vessels that touched along the coast.

Everything the Dons did they did it on horseback. At the time the early Californians were in their prime they were considered to be the finest horsemen in the world. Among their favorite sports were bear roping, horse racing, and rooster grabbing. Rooster grabbing, is truly, a very unique although slightly cruel game. A rooster is buried in the ground with nothing but his neck and head left out, which is thoroughly greased. The Dons then riding as fast as they can on their horses stoop over and attempt to jerk the rooster's head off. Who ever succeeds has fried chicken for supper.

Whenever there was a gathering of any kind there was bound to be dancing. To the tune of the guitar the Dons and Donas danced until sun up. Today we have to close our dance halls at midnight, in the old days they danced until after breakfast, and thought nothing of it.

Just Like Ours!

Talk about parachutes, volcanoes, Ford's, and cats and dogs—have you ever seen a bull fight?

As all things do have a beginning, this began in the middle of the day, in the middle of the year, and in the middle of—well, in the middle. Anyway, everyone was all sitting around trying to keep cool with Hoover, in a big amphi-theater or what—ever-you-call 'em. They were hollering in some sort of a peculiar note, and caps and shoes and what-not were flying up in the air. And, true to the old adage that "all that goes up must come down", these various articles returned vociferously, using as a target any convenient or good-natured ear or eye brow.

In the middle of all this hilarity, however, the band began to play "Just Before the Battle, Mother". At this point I shed bitter tears, but determined to keep a stiff upper lip and await the onslaught. To my great surprise two men came out in the big circle dressed up in red. You can imagine my disappointment and embarrassment, my dear. I thought it was to be a bull fight! But in just a few seconds some wild looking bull came dashing out, and the band started to play "There'll be a Hot Time in the Old Town Tonight." I almost had to yell at those two red men to get out of the way, but they seemed to be quite nonchalant in spite of the absence of Murads. They finally noticed the bull, though, because he had a way of making his presence known, and I never saw such running around. It was enough to make any African turn pale with envy. Anyway, they kept waving their capes—trying to attract the attention of the bull. Can you imagine anything so dumb? The whole affair honestly looked like a marathon; and with everyone shouting and hitting each other—well, I felt highly intoxicated or something or other.

Finally, though, in the last round,

Colorful!

The attire of a Don one hundred years ago is described in detail by Alfred Robinson in his historic book, "Life in California Before the Conquest."

The particular Don described by Robinson was Don Tomas Antonio Yorba, proprietor of the Rancho Sanitago de Santa Ana, which ranch included the Santa Ana of today. Robinson visited the ranch house, located at what is now Olive, in 1829.

"Upon his head," wrote Robinson, "Don Tomas wore a black silk handkerchief, the four corners of which hung down his neck behind. An embroidered shirt, a cravat of white jaconet tastefully tied, a blue damask vest, short clothes of crimson velvet, a bright-green cloth jacket with large silver buttons, and shoes of embroidered deerskin, comprised his dress."

In another part of his book referring perhaps to California in the '40's description of the dress of Californians in general:

"The dress worn by the middling class of females is a chemise with short embroidered sleeves richly trimmed with lace, a muslin petticoat flounced with scarlet and secured at the waist with a silk band of the same color, shoes of velvet or blue satin, a cotton reboso or scarf, pearl necklace and earrings, with the hair falling in broad plaits down the back. Others of the higher class, dress in the English style, and instead of the reboso substitute a rich and costly shawl of silk or satin. There is something graceful in the management of the reboso that the natives alone can impart, and the perfect nonchalance with which it is thrown about them and worn adds greatly to its beauty."

"Very few of the men have adopted our mode of dress, the greater part adhering to the ancient costume of the past century. Short clothes, and jacket trimmed with scarlet, a silk sash about the waist, botas of ornamented and embroidered deerskin secured by colored garters, embroidered shoes, the hair long, braided and fastened behind with ribbons, a black silk handkerchief around the head, surmounted by an oval and broad-brimmed hat, is the dress universally worn by men of California."

the old bull began to waiver, and he began to go around in circles with that "hang-over" expression on his face. Then his knees suddenly lost complete self-confidence, and he gave one "Moo" and fell down. That's all I remember. I wanted to rush down with smelling salts, but there was too much arm static and elbow interference.

It was a great battle, but I always feel so sorry for the poor old bull.

Spanish Society

By Virginia Thomas

With black eyes flashing, and cheeks aglow, the senoritas and senores wended their way about in the intricate dance, "La Jota". This marked the end of a typical fiesta day in the celebration of "La Fiesta de Ochos Dias", which lasted eight days.

Early that morning, the people had gone to hear early mass. After the religious services, the children played about underneath the green olive trees, while the senoras prepared the food for the barbecue. The rancheros brought beef and sheep from their ranches. The meat was quartered and spitted over a bed of glowing coals.

An almost endless variety of Spanish dishes were prepared among which were tamales, enchiladas, and pimento sauces. There was wine and coffee to drink. Perhaps the most attractive feature about these feasts was that no collection was taken—everything was free.

In the afternoon, there were two attractions—"El Corrido de Toros", by young and old, the bright rebosos and mantillas of the senoritas contrasting pleasantly with the darker suits of the men. Sometimes these fights ended in tragedy, but more often man was the victor. It was at the horse races that the "caballeros" put their most beautiful horses through their paces. Noble Spanish men from all sections of the country entered these races, vying for the honor of being crowned by a charming senorita.

Spanish Serenade

The night was soft and balmy with the little planets and island-universes above shining with a clear twinkling figure that out. Beneath the ventana of his senorita his novia—stood Don Geeting strumming on his guitar, in fact, he was serenading her. That means to annoy your lady-love until she agrees to marry you to stop the horrid excuse for music. He played and sang "I got a woman crazy for me," until his love whispered from her window that she would go crazy if he didn't play something else. He tried to play "Why do you sit on your patio," but he couldn't get a natural out of the darn thing so he changed to "Changes", and just fooled around.

After playing for two hours he had received no more encouragement than a quartette of felines on the back-fence at midnight. That is, in other words, he was the unwilling receptor of numerous old shoes, pesetas, and intimate articles of clothing which he is selling to this day down at Feitchbaum's Second-hand store on West Fourth. Every year he makes donation of Spanish clothing to the Fiesta committee which has been wearing it this last week.

Dons Enjoy Final Club Activities As School Year Draws To Close

French Clubs Active; Chorea Club New This Year

One of the latest organized clubs in Santa Ana junior college is the Chorea club. Its purpose is to promote the art of natural dancing among women. Students must try out and be voted in by club members. Only those women who receive an "A" or a "B" as a semester grade, or show particular talent in the art are eligible to try out. The membership is limited to twelve women.

O. K. Club

In order to promote a friendly feeling socially among the students who do not live at home, the O. K. club has been organized. Approximately fifty members are enjoying the benefits of this organization.

French Club

Three French clubs have been formed, two in beginning French, and one in advanced French. The Bon Matin club meets every other week, and the members have breakfast together. The Gais Parisiens meet at a luncheon semi-monthly, and L'Hotel de Rambouillet had afternoon teas. Conversation at the meetings is restricted to French only. The combined membership is one hundred students.

German Club

The German club, with a membership of twenty-five, has afternoon and evening meetings three times a semester. Programs, games, and conversation are conducted in German.

Co-op Club

Commercial students have formed a Co-op club in their line of work. Socials are held every month. The club is composed of nineteen members.

French Anniversary Observed By Club

Celebrating the 500th anniversary of Jeanne d'Arc, the "Gais Parisiens" held a delightful luncheon last Thursday noon.

Mary Harlow and Melva Fletcher spoke in French on the history of Jeanne d'Arc. Isabel Saricusa gave a most interesting account of her trip to Italy last summer. She made her talk even more interesting by showing an Italian doll, a pair of wooden shoes and many photographs of the places she visited.

Following her talk, Felix Garnsey, Grace Haskell, Dorothy Diehl, and Florence Caverly gave short anecdotes in French.

BON MATIN CLUB HOLDS BREAKFAST

A delightful breakfast was enjoyed by members of the "Bon Matin" French club last Wednesday morning.

Dorothy Harman, president, read in French Lamartine's death scene of Jeanne d'Arc. Miss Watson exhibited pictures of Paris and gave a short talk on each.

"Tavern Coach" Name Of Literary Book

"Tavern Coach" is to be the title of the book edited by the Literary club. Interest has been increasing in the edition and at this time 35 prose contributions, 40 poems and a one act play have been turned in which will furnish a great deal of material to choose from.

The book is to be a 32 page edition with an appropriate cover design in three colors made by Neal Harlow. It is to be handsomely illustrated throughout by the Alpha Rho Tau art club. It will be out about May 24 and will sell for fifteen cents.

The prizes for the contest are on display in the jaycee library. Three women who are leaders in women's literary affairs in Santa Ana have consented to act as judges. They are Mrs. M. B. Willington, Mrs. W. M. De Wolf and Miss Buelah Mae.

Beta Gamma Plans Beach Party Soon

Beta Gamma members will enjoy a beach party in place of their regular May meeting. It is rumored that transportation will be furnished by a truck.

The final banquet will be held in June at which time officers for next year will be elected.

Beta Gamma is an honorary club made up of students who are especially active in college activities or who have done unselfish work for the college.

George Tobias is president of the organization.

Former J. C. Student Wins High Honors

Robert O'Brien, graduate of Santa Ana junior college, was awarded a Student Life Editor's pin at Pomona college on Thursday, May 9, for his services as editor of the college daily and member of the Student Executive Board last semester.

Mr. O'Brien had been prominent in his work on the Don while he was attending Santa Ana jaycee. In fact it was because of his interest in the Don that the paper was started. He used his own money for the paper in order to make it a success. He is also the originator of the Santa Ana junior college seal, and was prominent in other activities.

In addition to his newspaper work at Pomona college, O'Brien is on the staff of the Metate, college yearbook, and the Manuscripts, Pomona college literary publication, and is United Press representative in Claremont. He is a member of Alpha Delta Mu, honorary journalistic fraternity and Scribblers, Pomona college literary society. He is also reading in honors in sociology.

universities and colleges of high standing.

Each candidate may select the particular scholarship for which he desires to compete, and notify his high school principal. The principal will then select the two candidates—one boy and one girl—who, according to the above criteria, are best qualified to compete.

Each of the two candidates thus selected from each high school will be required to write an original essay of approximately one thousand words on the subject "Business as a Profession", and as a part of this essay will explain why he selected the particular course for which he is a candidate.

All essays, together with their accompanying recommendations of the respective candidates as submitted by their principals, will be judged by a committee. The three candidates in each group (nine in all) who grade highest will then be called to Los Angeles for personal interviews with the committee, and for gradings in personality, natural aptitude and purpose. The final selection of three will then be made—one from each group.

Essays and recommendations of principals must be received at Woodbury not later than June 15. Successful candidates may enter any time from date of high school graduation to October 1, 1929.

Madame Budrow And Faustina Lucero Entertain Visitors And Students Today

Madame Budrow

Singing And Dancing Popular Features On Program

Madame Manuela Budrow, vocalist of Santa Ana, one of the musicians featured in today's Fiesta celebration, is not only well known in Santa Ana as a teacher but also throughout Southern California as the Spanish nightingale.

Two Spanish selections will be featured by Madame Budrow "Chalita" by Victor Persinger and "Estrelita" by Ponce in her program today. These she will sing in the language in which they were written, which she prefers to use as she herself is of Spanish descent.

Among the world renowned pupils with whom this soprano has studied are included Colanco, Festa and Leoni.

Madame Budrow appeared last year on the Fiesta program at the college and was very enthusiastically received.

Classes in Santa Ana, Anaheim and Fullerton consume the musicians time as well as many outside engagements in Southern California.

Miss Faustina Lucero, well known Spanish dancer, is one of the principal features of today's Spanish program.

Miss Lucero, who is a resident of Santa Ana, has appeared in several Los Angeles theaters where she has been very popular. She has appeared on the Orpheum circuit, Pantages, and Fanchon and Marco. Miss Lucero was California's representative at the Philadelphia Exposition, touring several states and dancing in many cities.

She was one of the most popular features of the Fiesta program last year, when the first Don and Dona, Pete Lehr and Flora Groenow, were crowned by Father O'Sullivan.

For several years Miss Lucero has danced and has taught dancing. At present she is filling engagements in various programs.

There will be a guided trip through the inn at four o'clock. After the dinner, students will hear an organ recital.

Music Notes

Two Wagner books of great interest, written in a scholarly manner, have recently been published in Germany. One supposedly dealing with the life of Cosima, beloved wife of Wagner, by Richard Graf du Moulin Eckart, treats not so much the life of an immortal musician, but with Cosima's life during the years of his association with her. It is an unparalleled story of undying devotion according to Ernest Newman, foremost music critic.

So complete is her submission to help Wagner that she realizes her very life ends with the day he dies. She cuts her beautiful hair that he loved so well and placed it on his breast and ended her real life.
